"Tay is not seeking to excuse his behaviour," his lawyer said, adding that Tay "regrets" his behaviour. The counsel continued that Tay is ready to face the "lengthy imprisonment" and had quit his job, which will result in the loss of income for his family.

"This is his first time in court in his 43 years of life," the defence submitted. Tay was handed 14 months' imprisonment and a fine of S$3,000.

As Tay is unable to pay the fine, he will serve 10 days in prison in lieu of paying the fine.

Online personality Kurt Tay has been found guilty of distributing sexual content without consent and making threats.

Tay had sent photos and videos of the victim performing a sex act to multiple Telegram groups and users on Oct. 27, 2023.

This comes after a video of Tay engaging in scatophillac sex activities was leaked, and he accused the victim of doing so.

He had previously engaged her for sexual services that included degradation and humiliation.

The prosecutor sought 16 months' imprisonment, calling it a case of revenge.

Meanwhile, the defence asked for 10 months, saying Tay is "sincerely remorseful" and, otherwise, a "law-abiding citizen".

The judge ultimately sentenced Tay to 14 months in jail as well as a fine of S$3,000. He has to serve 10 days in jail as a default for not being able to pay the fine.

Kurt Tay, 43, gets 14 months & 10 days' jail for distributing sexual content on Telegram

He pleaded guilty.

43-year-old Tay Foo Wei, better known online as Kurt Tay, was sentenced to 14 months and 10 days in prison on Apr. 22 for sending intimate images and recordings of a woman to a Telegram group chat in October 2023 without the woman's consent.

He originally faced 10 charges related to the non-consensual distribution of sexual content on Telegram and one charge under the Protection from Harassment Act.

The Deputy Public Prosecutor applied to proceed with the first charge pertaining to the non-consensual distribution of intimate images and the POHA charge, with the rest of the nine charges taken into consideration during sentencing.

Tay pleaded guilty to the charges.

A gag order was imposed on the identity of the victim

A gag order was imposed on the identity of the victim.

Charges

Tay was accused of sending images and recordings of a woman engaging in sexual acts to a Telegram chat group on Oct. 27, 2023.

Charge sheets stated that Tay did so without the women's consent and knew that the distribution would likely cause the victim humiliation.

The victim cannot be named due to a gag order.

Any person found guilty of distributing or threatening to distribute an intimate image or recording without consent is liable to a prison term which may extend to five years, caning, a fine, or a combination of such punishments.

Tay was also charged under the Protection from Harassment Act for making threatening communication in a Telegram group chat on Oct. 18, 2023.

According to charge sheets, Tay had sent messages such as, "How much 2 hired killer".

For this, he could have been handed a fine not exceeding S$5,000.

Tay was first charged in court on Nov. 1, 2023, and returned to court on Nov. 16 that same year.

On both occasions, he was heckled.

Tay was represented in court by a public defender.

Before the hearing

Tay arrived at the state courts, flanked by his representatives.

Members of the public filled almost three rows of seats in the courtroom during the Apr. 22 hearing.

Some were heard discussing and deriding Tay.

Before the hearing commenced, Tay and his legal representatives stepped outside of the courtroom twice.

He was represented by public defenders.

He was represented by public defenders.

After returning the first time, Tay was seen sitting in the corner, solemnly as he inspected court documents on a tablet.

Meeting the victim

Laying out the prosecution's case, Deputy Public Prosecutor (DPP) Dan Pan told the court that Tay engaged the victim after seeing her content on Twitter, now known as X.

The victim then told Tay to perform and record himself performing degrading acts, such as eating his own faeces and masturbating with his faeces.

At some point during their interaction, Tay informed the victim that one of his videos had been leaked, in which one of his tattoos was partially visible.

The victim denied leaking the video, claimed she lost her phone and threatened to send the videos to Tay's wife.

Tay had earlier told the victim that his wife was depressed and would be upset if she found out about their interactions.

The victim later apologised.

Distributing the victim's intimate recording

On Sep. 5, 2023, Tay received an intimate video and image of the victim engaging in a sexual act with a man.

The victim was identifiable in the recording and image, the DPP told the court.

Tay allegedly approached the victim about the recording and image, to which the victim dismissed as a "joke", the DPP said.

On Sep. 7, Tay asked for an "in-person session" with the victim, and the two got into a disagreement.

The victim threatened to make Tay lose his job.

Tay later alleged that compromising videos and photos of him were sent to his wife and in a messaging group chat.

On Oct. 18, 2023, Tay reportedly posted threatening messages, such as "How much to hire killer", in a group chat with 247 members.

This group chat was purportedly for fans of Tay.

According to the DPP, the victim's friends who were in the group identified the subject of Tay's messages as the victim and informed her about it.

Feeling alarmed, the victim then lodged a police report.

On the morning of Oct. 27, Tay allegedly sent an intimate recording and image of the victim multiple times to a group chat.

The DPP described Tay's actions as "an eye for an eye", and said that the messages Tay sent could easily be forwarded by any one of the 247 members.

Prosecution sought 16 weeks' jail

Delivering the verdict, District Judge Lee Lit Cheng found Tay guilty of the charges.

Relating to the POHA charge, the DPP sought a fine of S$4,000, arguing that the threatening communications Tay made were "serious" and were "effectively a public declaration" of his desire for wanting the victim dead.

For the offence relating to non-consensual distribution of intimate images, the DPP sought 16 months' imprisonment.

The DPP argued Tay's actions had caused a "high degree" of harm.

While the defence argued that the resolution of the recording was low, the DPP countered that the recording was "relatively clear" and the victim was identifiable, with most of her face visible.

10 different people had informed the victim that her intimate recording was leaked, the DPP also pointed out.

There was also widespread distribution of the recording and image, reiterating that Tay had sent them multiple times.

He had also left them in the group chat without deleting them for some time.

On intent, the DPP said the fact that Tay sent the files multiple times showed that he intended to cause the victim "significant, if not [maximum] humiliation".

He also said that Tay had acted out of "malice" and for the "purpose of revenge".

The DPP referenced during his sentencing submission a previous high court case, which serves as a sentencing framework for offences related to the distribution of intimate images and recordings.

Considering that Tay had pleaded guilty, the prosecution sought 16 months' jail for the charge relating to the non-consensual distribution of an intimate image and recording.

Mitigation

In mitigation, Tay's defence counsel made the point that the victim had used her sexual relationship with Tay to procure Tay's intimate recordings and had used them to threaten Tay.

Tay had also "explicitly" told the victim not to share such recordings, the defence said.

Despite this, the recordings were distributed.

He also pointed out the victim had herself said she was motivated by "trolling" Tay.

The defence counsel also zeroed in on the fact that the victim had also made threats against Tay, such as saying she could cause Tay to lose his job and family.

"The [victim's] behaviour suggests that the degree of alarm caused to her must be attenuated to some degree," the defence counsel remarked.

The victim's behaviour, he continued, was not consistent with "a high degree of alarm".

Taken together, a S$2,000 fine relating to the POHA charge would "suffice", the defence counsel argued.

Moving on to non-consensual intimate image distribution, the defence noted that the recording was six seconds long and at 240p resolution.

Responding to the point that 10 persons had reached out to the victim about the recording, the defence counsel countered that these persons were in the chat and privy to the spat between Tay and her, rather than encountering the image and recording "in the wild".

The defence argued that the relationship dynamic between Tay and the victim puts Tay in a position that was more susceptible to being manipulated.

He also countered that there was no "calculated malice [for] personal gain" on Tay's part, and that he had acted out of "anger and frustration" instead.

The defence also highlighted that the victim did not react adversely to the fact that Tay had intimate recordings of her and instead brushed it off when he informed her about it.

The defence also disagreed with the characterisation that Tay had set out to "maximise humiliation".

The repeated threats against him and the circulation of his own videos resulted in Tay's actions, which are akin to someone "shouting or venting".

"Tay is not seeking to excuse his behaviour," his lawyer said, adding that Tay "regrets" his behaviour.

The counsel continued that Tay is ready to face the "lengthy imprisonment" and had quit his job, which will result in the loss of income for his family.

Relating to the referenced high court case, the defence argued that Tay's case was lower in degree in terms of harm and culpability

On these grounds, the defence sought 10 months' imprisonment.

"This is his first time in court in his 43 years of life," the defence submitted.

Judge

District Judge Lee Lit Cheng queried both the DPP and defence about the nature of the group chat in which the victim's image and recording were distributed.

The DPP posited that members of the group chat were Tay's "fans", while the defence characterised them as people "who have an interest in Tay's life" and that they joined the group chat for "entertainment".

Delivering the sentence, Lee noted that there is "clear potential" for the victim's intimate image and recording to be distributed outside of the group chat.

She also noted that the victim had experienced alarm due to being identifiable in the intimate footage.

On culpability, the judge found that Tay did indeed act out of malice.

Tay was handed 14 months' imprisonment and a fine of S$3,000

As Tay is unable to pay the fine, he will serve 10 days in prison in lieu of paying the fine.

I don't think YRSG would have positions that are security related. Yes can give 2nd chance in certain jobs, but definitely not in sensitive positions.

Actually there were ppl who tried to help him, but he didn't appreciate all the help.

Goh wei choon from woke salaryman tried to give him advice, he brushed all the advice aside.

Doctor gave him health advice, he labelled the doctor as hater someone tried to give his children free books, he threw them all away.

which is why I feel a jail term may do him some good. Force him to reflect and also to detox his brain. Learn to be independent as well, learn to work with others he barely does self reflection when outside, his mother still cook for him n does his laundry, whatever wrong things that he does (eg cheating on his wife), his mother also enable him n allow him to continue. For his job, he's usually one man show, no need to work with others, hence he doesn't have the chance to learn to be thoughtful and considerate. When he's outside, he has no opportunity to reflect n learn at all. In prison, maybe there will be counsellor to talk to him etc, he can also learn to work tgt with other inmates . This period that he's away from home may make him learn to appreciate his family more.

Will it change him totally? Maybe , maybe not. But no matter what it's still better than letting him roam outside repeating his mistakes over and over

This may sound harsh, but going to prison may do him more good than harm

I think the imh side actually wanted his family to go there n have a discussion on how to help him.

but he doesn't want his family to know/ get involved, plus he was suddenly afraid of losing his security licence , so he chickened out and dropped everything clearly this person has serious mental issues. i don't think it's appropriate for him to be around his kids immediately after being released from prison. he should seek proper treatment first. we're talking about someone who was reported to have eaten his own feces.. this is not a small issue.

I wonder has he serve ns? If he did serve ns, couldn't be the staying in & training together with section mates, platoon mates & company mates have help him to be independent

If 2 years in ns hasn't change him a bit, I doubt prison will, after all prison is more relax compared to in the military

I'm actually quite surprised if IMH declared him as normal

Which sane and normal person will ate his own feces? Not to mention going to Thailand to implant a "female" breast

Next removed the breast and tattoo his armed and try to act garang and macho and every where he went he will bring along his Wrestling belt

Imo either he has split personality or something not right in his mind

Discussed before in older threads.

For a period of time I had access to industry groups that would bring up the topic of him and his issues from time to time. People know the exact location he is working - whether security or cleaning - they will write in to the security/cleaning company as well as the management of the property he is stationed at, tell them about his adventures, screenshots, links to videos, etc.

Typically it's not an issue to the companies themselves, because general consensus is that he shows up to work on time and does his job (keep in mind that these are industries where no-shows, last minute throw MC, general bad behaviour, etc are an everyday thing, so the bar is low) ... but either the management of the property will ask them about him, or the companies want to pre-empt issues with the management for deploying him there ... so they make the call to let him go.

Dude has openly shared his motive for taking on security guard jobs, especially all those night shifts, due to the fact that he can sleep on the job and nobody would know about it. No company would hire pple to sleep on the job, so it should be very easy to find reasons to let him go, on top of all the other stupid things that he engages in regularly which might bring disrepute to the company...

He did serve ns. Mono intake he claimed that he got bullied in army. Not sure how true that is la. But given his actions, bound to attract unwanted attention from those bengs in mono intake

I have no interest in defending him, but quite frankly you just described more than 50% ... perhaps closer to 75%, of security folk who only want to work night shift (remember, the bar is low).

Then when it comes to tasks like patrol, they carry clocking device need to touch tags throughout the route, which then records their route ... which point they went to 1st, 2nd, 3rd etc & at what time. Say is 1 thing, but this kind of thing cannot siam 1.

So ... yeah ... the fact of the matter is, that he doesn't get removed from jobs because he doesn't perform his duties, but because of people writing in duties, but because of people writing in.
